- Black and white version
- Reversed (drop-out) version

These images are saved in a Jpeg format at 300 dpi (dots per inch).

Is the logo adaptable for all graphic situations?

Yes, the logos are saved in high resolution at 300 dpi (dots per inch) and will be useable in almost every situation.

■ Printing

Use the hi-res logos (300 dpi) for materials such as brochures, booklets, calendars, posters, magazines, ads, promotional items and any other times when it is printed.

■ Electronic

Usually a lo-res logo (72 dpi) is all that is needed for electronic media such as web sites and power point presentations. You have the option to reduce the resolution or keep it at 300 dpi. However, for television you may choose to use either hi-res or lo-res versions.
